WHEREAS, Black Americans or African Americans has been a part of the very founding of the United States since even before the American Revolution, as far back as 1619, and have contributed mightily to the building of the American economy as both slave laborers and subsequently in freedom,

WHEREAS, And African Americans have fought valiantly in all of the nation's wars and one African American, Crispus Attucks, was the first to die in the American Revolution, and 180,000 African American soldiers fought in the Civil War, providing the critical fighting force that it took to save the nation from secession, and African Americans continued this heroic fighting tradition in World Wars I and II, and in Vietnam, and continuing into the conflicts in the Middle East in the modern era.

WHEREAS, And African Americans both in their own actions and in how they have been treated have shaped the American economy, healthcare system, educational system, popular music, governmental structure and political parties, it is impossible to understand American history without the inclusion of and understanding of African American history.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, that African American history should be included and interwoven into all American history from the elementary grades, through middle school, high school and at the college and university levels.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, tha attempts to eradicate the study of African American history under the premise that African American history represents "critical race theory" is a cynical and fraudulent pretext for removing the history racism and oppression that has been experienced by African Americans despite and all during their long history of contributing to the building of this great nation, the United States of America.
